

Hargreaves Associates Designing ExxonMobil's New Office Complex in Houston

SAN FRANCISCO, CA.--(BUSINESS WIRE) -- San Francisco, CA - based, Hargreaves Associates said today that they are the landscape architects and collaborating master planners for ExxonMobil's new office complex that will be developed in north Houston, Texas.

Hargreaves Associates is part of a team that includes Pickard Chilton as Design Architects, PDR as Program Manager and Interior Architect, and Gensler as Record and Interior Architect. The complex, which is comprised of multiple low-rise buildings, is designed with sustainability and site restoration as key features of the plan for this wooded site.

"This project represents a landmark for our firm and it has been an honor to be involved in such a significant project with such a great team" said Mary Margaret Jones FASLA, FAAR, Sr. Principal of Hargreaves Associates.

The campus has been designed to high standards of energy efficiency and environmental stewardship, and particularly capitalizes on the possibilities of creating indoor and outdoor places that will foster interaction and collaboration amongst employees in their daily work, as well as support their health and well-being.

"It has been extremely rewarding to face the challenge ExxonMobil presented us - to create a physical environment that will support innovation and inspire creative thinking" said firm Sr. Principal George Hargreaves, FASLA, RAAR.

Principal Brian Jencek added: "The opportunities of the site enhanced the ability for us to meet the project's first and foremost goal of supporting ExxonMobil's employees."

Construction and ongoing operations will create thousands of jobs, substantial state and local taxes and significant benefits to the Texas and Houston-area economy.
